

Dhruvi Acharya's recent show in Mumbai was a moving experience. In paintings and installations, Dhruvi brought alive the moments spent with her husband and the family – she explored a tragedy that changed her life forever. Moreover, the show was special because it revealed the amazing power that art possesses – the power to help you come to terms with loss.

Art, like time, has a way of healing the viewer. It often helps us connect different scattered parts of life and build a whole. It creates a space where broken thoughts and feelings can be mended; it creates an opportunity to face up to despair and depression; it allows us to repair broken worlds and move ahead with hope.

Dhruvi's work at the JSW Centre at BKC celebrates different initiatives our company has undertaken – the journey from raw material to finished steel to diverse products; our heritage-related monument restoration work in Hampi; our hospital and other people-focused institutions. It also shows the way we lead our lives – caught between home and office, we strive for the right balance.

Taking a cue from Dhruvi's work, I wish you the strength to surmount challenges. Let not temporary setbacks drain you of strength. Let's not get affected by negative energies – let's celebrate stability, determination and the desire to look forward to a better, brighter future.

Warm regards,

Pangita Jindal

Dhruvi Acharya. JSW. Synthetic polymer paint and charcoal on unprimed canvas. 384" x 84", 84" x 48": 8 panels. 2013. At the Connect Café, JSW Centre, BKC, Mumbai.

Dhruvi Acharya's recent show in Mumbai was a moving experience. In paintings and installations, Dhruvi brought alive the moments spent with her husband and the family – she explored a tragedy that changed her life forever. Moreover, the show was special because it revealed the amazing power that art possesses – the power to help you come to terms with loss.

Art, like time, has a way of healing the viewer. It often helps us connect different scattered parts of life and build a whole. It creates a space where broken thoughts and feelings can be mended; it creates an opportunity to face up to despair and depression; it allows us to repair broken worlds and move ahead with hope.

Dhruvi's work at the JSW Centre at BKC celebrates different initiatives our company has undertaken – the journey from raw material to finished steel to diverse products; our heritage-related monument restoration work in Hampi; our hospital and other people-focused institutions. It also shows the way we lead our lives – caught between home and office, we strive for the right balance.

Taking a cue from Dhruvi's work, I wish you the strength to surmount challenges. Let not temporary setbacks drain you of strength. Let's not get affected by negative energies – let's celebrate stability, determination and the desire to look forward to a better, brighter future.

Warm regards,

Dangita Jindal